While fall is always a special time at The University of Alabama, at the Capstone College of Nursing, this is indeed a very special fall. If you have driven down University Boulevard lately you have seen our new building under construction at the entrance to the campus. It now has the frame in place for three floors and will gain a roof in October. We are still on schedule to occupy the building in June 2010.

The Alabama Nursing Hall of Fame recognizing nurses and others who have brought honor and fame to the nursing profession and to the State of Alabama will induct six new members on October 15th. Dr. Jeanette VanderMeer, in our college is among the six nurses being honored.

Of course it would not be fall without homecoming. October 17th will see alumni, faculty and students gather for one last barbecue on the lawn at Russell Hall. Our students are busy designing their float and planning how they can once again capture the much sought after Spirit Award.

We also celebrate the success of our 99 May graduates, a record number for our college, and their 97% pass rate on the N-CLEX, the national licensure exam for registered nurses. They encountered a slightly different job market due to the economy and the closure of one Birmingham hospital. Experienced RNs who had planned to retire, decided to stay a little longer in the workforce and some nurses decided to increase their hours. The result was that our graduates were not always able to secure their first choice of location or specialty. Despite these temporary conditions, health care continues to be the one area of the economy anticipating significant growth.

This fall also continues our unprecedented enrollment growth, with 1334 undergraduate students and 170 graduate students including those in our MSN Case Management and Clinical Nurse Leader Tracks, our Doctor of Nursing Practice students and our EdD for nurse educators in collaboration with the College of Education.

It is clear that our college is growing on many fronts. We invite you as alumni and friends of the college to participate as a member of our Alumni Association, our Board of Visitors, or by offering your wisdom and financial support. With your help, we will continue to thrive. ✨

WELCOME CHIBA UNIVERSITYStudents and Faculty

Chiba nursing students enrolled in the Transcultural nursing exchange course arrived in Tuscaloosa February 2009. They spent two weeks with Capstone College of Nursing students in the classroom and in clinical settings. Students were introduced to the American culture and health care system and also took English classes at UA’s English Language Institute. Students spent time with an American host family over the weekend.

Seventeen nursing students, and their advisor, Hiroshi Yamada, from Chiba University in Japan attended the Transcultural Nursing Program at CCN from February 22–March 6, 2009. The program included nursing classes taught by CCN faculty, informal seminars, clinical tours, and daily English classes at the English Language Institute. Clinical tours included DCH Regional Medical Center, DCH Northport Medical Center, and Capstone Village. As usual, Hiroko Smith, who is from Japan, did a stellar job of guiding the tour at DCH Northport Medical Center.

Social activities included dinner at the Cypress Inn, dinner at Dean Barger’s home, a trip to Wal-Mart, and a Farewell Ceremony held at the Museum of Natural History. At Dean Barger’s the CCN ambassadors and the Chiba students shared cultural dances and songs. All of the students were hosted in homes of families in the community over the week-end. At the Farewell Ceremony all of the participants were recognized and given a certificate of attendance. Justin Oliver, singer and son of Dr. Jo Ann Oliver provided entertainment of special American songs.

CCN ambassadors were involved throughout the program. Ambassadors participating were Kathleen Benak, Tyler Keenum, Katherine McGiffert, Anna Davis, Alicia Wright, Kelly Lovell, Claire McClenny, Spence Handley, Lauren Perkins, Johnnie Tice, Amber Miles, Elizabeth Wright, Nick Lemaster and Kenzie Walden. Student assistants involved in the program were Ashley Williams and Megan Pyper.

A special thanks to CCN faculty and staff who assisted with the program: Dr. Linda Dunn, Dr. Marilyn Handley, Dr. Michelle McKay, Dr. Mary Umlauf, Mr. Tom Little, Stephanie Wynn, Dr. Ann Kelley, and Deborah Holloway. Monica Gragg and Olivia May assisted Dr. Susan Gaskins in coordinating the program.

In June 2009, Dr. Mary Umlauf, RN, PhD, Professor at the Capstone College of Nursing, was an honored guest at the 25 anniversary of the School of Nursing at Jordan University of Science and Technology (JUST) in Irbid, Jordan. Dr. Umlauf has a long history of providing faculty development support to nursing faculty at JUST and across Jordan. Her work dates back to her first visit in 1991 and her subsequent Fulbright Award in 1995-1997; totaling more than a dozen extended visits. Dr. Umlauf has mentored many of the faculty by providing editorial support for manuscripts and consultation for research projects. The JUST nursing program has grown from just a handful of faculty and a few hundred students to well over a thousand undergraduate nursing students and a new masters nursing program. At this most recent visit, Dr. Umlauf was honored by receiving recognition from the Royal Patron of Nursing, HRH Princess Muna, mother of King Abdullah of Jordan.

Imagine running the length of the Bryant-Denny Stadium football field 109 times, but only after completing a one-mile long swim and a bike course that is almost 25 miles long. As impossible as this may seem, it is a challenge that is regularly faced and conquered by the members of the Alabama Triathletes including Junior nursing students Alex Woodard from Columbus, Mississippi and Meredith Tyler from Birmingham, Alabama.

Alex, who started competing in triathlons in 2005, has already participated in 35 sprint and Olympic-distance events. He doesn’t believe in skipping classes or missing training. “I train every day and do a little bit of everything each day. I swim in the morning, bike around lunch and run in the evening,” he said. Alex begins training about 5 a.m. and also trains between classes. He said balancing sports and school is nothing new to him. He was on the cross-country and swim teams in high school and was already training on a daily basis. He ran his first triathlon during his senior year in high school. “Training for a triathlon is similar to cross-country in that it takes regular daily training,” he said. “You may not have to run as far, but you’re swimming and biking every day.” While he has little leisure time, Alex said he plans to do triathlons as long as his body will let him. “It’s addictive seeing how fast you can go and what good shape you can get in,” he said. “And it’s a great way to travel around the world.”

Alex’s career as a triathlete began on a borrowed bike in August of 2005. “My uncle was a triathlete and talked me into competing in an event in Guntersville,” he said. “And I figured since I was already swimming and running cross-country in high school, I might as well go for the trifecta. “So he let me borrow his bike and I finished fifth in the beginner’s division out of like 200 people, and I have been hooked since then.”

Meredith grew up as a competitive gymnast. After graduating from high school she decided to retire from gymnastics and try something new in college. Originally looking for a fun sport to keep in shape and meet new people, she had no idea triathlon would become such a huge part of her life. Meredith currently trains at least twice a day. A typical day usually starts around 5:30 a.m. with a swim or run, and ends with either a bike, run, or a combination of all three. “Triathlon takes a lot of discipline and dedication, but UA has a great team, and we all work together to stay motivated,” she said. They have four races as a team each semester and she races on her own during the summer. Meredith is currently ranked first in the SECTC for 2009, and was second in 2008. She raced in a national championship race this summer and placed eighth, which qualified for world championships in 2010. Currently in the first semester of upper division nursing, Meredith finished last semester with a 4.0. “Upper division will be challenging, but I hope to continue to succeed with both grades and triathlons.”

Although the Alabama Triathletes have only been an established club for five years, the team is already making a big impact on intercollegiate triathlon competition. For the past four years they have been the overall team champion and had the overall female and male champions in the Southeast Collegiate Triathlon Conference.

Beginning in the spring, Alex and Meredith will have to add something else to their list of things to juggle. They will begin clinicals in the hospital with their second semester of upper division nursing.

Good luck to them and the entire UA team.
Like most, Megan Brischler was thrilled to land her dream job soon after graduating from the University of Alabama in December 2007, but she never dreamed that she would come away with more than job satisfaction.

She put her nursing degree to use by landing a job at the only hospital she had imagined herself working - Children's Healthcare of Atlanta at Scottish Rite.

“I knew I was going to work at Children’s Healthcare,” Megan said with a knowing smile. “I had a bunch of friends and family who work there, and I heard it was the place to be for pediatric nursing.”

And while it can be heartbreaking and stressful, Megan added, that the emotional whirlwind of a career brings her joy when she is able to help sick children.

After only 5 months on the job, while working the night shift, Megan, who had crossed paths with a number of children with various degrees of illnesses and injuries during their short stays met a patient who would become special - Carlyle Rollins.

Megan, a native of Gwinnett County who calls Dunwoody home, met 9-year-old Carlyle, the daughter of Danielle and Glen Rollins, of Atlanta in July. Carlyle’s leg was crushed just below the knee after an accident on a go-cart. After spending time in the pediatric ICU, Carlyle was placed on the second floor where she met Mega.

“I was her night nurse,” Megan recalled. After seeing each other during her work nights, they quickly formed a special bond. The chemistry was so noticeable that megan said co-workers described their relationship as ‘older sister, younger sister’.

The two shared a passion for the American Girl dolls and often during breaks Megan would spend time with Carlyle. The two would sometimes spend time in Carlyle’s bed playing with the dolls and their accessories or simply watching TV.

For Danielle Rollins, who watched her daughter fight through the near-death experience and multiple surgeries and procedures —Megan and the other nurses and doctors had become like a family. Carlyle would spend a total of 3 months in Children’s, both Scottish Rite and later, Egleston, where she was placed on a ventilator after suffering from a secondary infection.

Danielle said it was something special about Megan, who she described as “young and very beautiful. They hit it off.”

Every night she came to work, Danielle said Megan was always, “so chipper. She’s just a sweet person.”

Every evening, Carlyle said she eagerly checked the board to see if Megan was on the schedule. “She was just nice,” Carlyle said who she describes as ‘Megan, my very, very special nurse friend.”

It was a difficult 3 months for the Rollins family, Danielle said she thought of times when she wondered if she would leave the hospital with her only daughter alive, and praised the work of the staff at Children’s where the family still visits for checkups and treatments. Carlyle now has an external fixature on the leg that they once thought would have to be amputated. She has two more surgeries to undergo.

Through it all, Carlyle and Megan grew closer. And when she had some rough nights, Megan was there to help comfort and reassure her.

When she had to return to the ICU, Megan visited during her breaks. And, when Carlyle was transported to Egleston, she visited her there.

“Some of the time, she didn’t know I was there,” Megan recalled. Like Carlyle’s parents, she was happy when Carlyle was released from Egleston to her home. “She went from a wheelchair to a walker and now she can walk,” she said. “She has this amazing spirit, and I’m proud of her accomplishments.”

The two stay in contact via email, cell phone text messaging and every few months they get together for a girl’s day outing. A few weeks ago, they went to Build-A-Bear Workshop and had lunch at the American Girl Bistro.

“You can pay someone to do a job, but you can’t pay someone to love the job. It’s more than a calling,” Danielle said of Megan and the Children’s staff passion as Carlyle was undergoing physical therapy.

Although nursing can be a hectic and stressful career, Megan said, “It’s worth it. Nursing school is extremely hard, but it’s definitely worth it in the end. It’s an emotional career but you get so many rewards…the biggest reward is helping people.”

Patient Carlyle Rollins (left) and her friend, nurse Megan Brischler reunited last week at a special luncheon to raise funds for Children’s Healthcare of Atlanta.
NURSING: THE OLDEST ART

I grew up in Signal Mountain, Tennessee, before moving to Tuscaloosa in 2002. Despite living in Tennessee for 17 years, I somehow managed to become an Alabama fan. I always knew the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa was where I wanted to further my education. In fact, I applied nowhere else; so I am fortunate I was accepted.

While growing up and trying to find a favorite pastime, I dabbled in a variety of activities such as softball, horseback riding and arts and crafts. Swimming, however, became my first love. In middle school, I was fortunate to be able to attend Girls Preparatory School in Chattanooga. This private school is known for challenging girls in all aspects of life, not just academically. I found a second home on the school’s swim team, my initial reason for applying GPS. I loved the school until ninth grade when the excess estrogen on campus began to annoy me. For the sake of avoiding female cattiness and drama, I became very isolated and searched for the positives the school had to offer me. Since swimming had become my life before and after school, I learned that the outstanding art and science departments were the two places inside school where I could truly express myself. Although I didn’t think I had talent for art, somehow I managed to win several awards at GPS. Science classes, especially those with labs, were extremely interesting to me.

When it was time to apply for college, I knew where I wanted to go, but the decision concerning a degree was uncertain. Since I did have some artistic talent, I decided to become an art major. To my dismay during the Christmas holidays of my freshman year, my father lovingly told me he didn’t want to pay for a hobby. I knew I wanted an exciting career in which I would be able to make a difference in the world, so I considered nursing and began the pre-nursing courses. The following Christmas I had no money to spend on presents, so I painted pictures for my family. They turned out really well, and my father encouraged me to look for a way to combine both my passion for helping others with my creative mind. Considering the detailed nature of my artwork, he strongly pressured for plastic surgery to be my goal; so the major was changed yet again to pre med! Unfortunately, pre-med courses did not involve the cool anatomy and physiology courses I found so intriguing. To me, chemistry and physics were ridiculously boring. I changed to biology for a while, later drifted to psychology, and briefly courted theatre. A little over a year ago, I realized that my parents’ advice is always supportive and valuable, but sometimes they just don’t know my heart. I have now come full circle and ended right back where my heart has always led me. I am happier than I have ever been. I am fascinated by the magnificence of the human body and am humbled that I will be able to help others while making a decent living. I still have the thought of becoming a plastic surgeon in the back of my mind, and I will always nurture my love for sports and art. I am honored to be a nursing student at the Capstone College of Nursing. My goal for now is to say I will become a proud graduate of the program and represent the Capstone well wherever I go.

Present Job:
Nurse Practitioner working with West Alabama Emergency Physicians at Northport DCH Emergency Dept.
and West Alabama Family Physicians,
P.C. at First Care.

Personal Info:
When able to get off from work, I love the outdoors.

Favorite Memory of CCN:  Starting my first clinicals with Dr. Marsha Adams in Centerville, AL. Being there and providing the basic care that was taught to me and my classmates----then seeing that you can make a difference.

Last Book I Read:  Multiple journals with health care. I try to stay up-to-date with the field of Advance Practice Nursing.

Last Movie I Saw:  Star Trek

Favorite Quote:  Don’t worry about the past; just know tomorrow you can do better.

Advice to Graduating Seniors:  Unfortunately you are coming out in one of the worst economic times many have never seen. Though times look bad, your need is great. Be able to market yourself and what you have achieved from CCN.

Last Movie I Saw:  Ghosts of Girlfriends Past

Favorite Quote:  Not to engage in the pursuit of ideas is to live like ants instead of like men.

Advice to Graduating Seniors:  The nursing field has so much to offer, never work some place where you are not happy. If you get no sense of fulfillment, your patients will be the first to notice!
TOPPING OUT PARTY

On Friday, October 2, Doster Construction invited CCN and friends to join the construction crew at a “Topping Out Party” at the new building. A “Topping Out Party” is thrown for the workers when the actual structure is complete. Everyone was able to walk through the building, and blue prints were on site so everyone could locate their offices. Thank you to everyone working so hard on our new building!

Faculty Highlights

Dr. Marsha Adams was selected as a University of Alabama Leadership Fellow and a Southeastern Conference Leadership Fellow. The mission of the Leadership Academy is to prepare University faculty and staff for senior leadership positions at the University and other flagship universities.

Dr. Adams along with Dr. Theresa Valiga, edited Achieving Excellence in Nursing Education which was published by the NLN and continues the NLN’s long tradition of championing excellence in nursing education. Dr. Adams is editor and contributing author to another NLN publication, Excellence in Nursing Education. She also contributed the chapter, “Educator Perspective on Transitioning Clinicians into the Academic Faculty Role,” in Clinical Nursing Education: Current Reflections.

In addition, Dr. Adams and Dr. Sara Barger were recognized by Governor Bob Riley for the college’s work with KidCheck. The KidCheck initiative is based on the partnership model developed by Dr. Adams and the Bibb County Child Caring Foundation. A special thank you goes to the CCN Fundamentals faculty and students who make this project such a success!

Dr. Jeri Dunkin received a standing ovation from the participants at the technical workshop for the DON HRSA grants on September 16 and 17 in Rockville, Maryland. There were about 200 representatives from schools of nursing all over the country. During the director’s opening remarks, she gave an outstanding summary of Jeri’s work as a pioneer with nurse managed clinics and the acquisition of FHQC status.

Dr. Angela Collins and Dr. Ann Graves had their manuscript entitled “Developing an Interactive Microsimulation Method in Pharma-cology,” accepted for publication in the Journal of Nursing Education as an Educational Innovation article. Dr. Collins was also promoted to Clinical Professor. She is the first to hold this rank in Alabama.

Dr. Linda Dunn, Dr. Jeri Dunkin and Dr. Marilyn Handley published “The Provision of Spiritual Care by Registered Nurses on a Maternal Infant Unit” in the Journal of Holistic Nursing, March 2009.

Dr. JoAnn Oliver received a Department of Defense grant entitled “A Prostate Cancer and Screening Educational Intervention among African-American Men Dwelling in the Rural South.” Dr. Oliver has just been appointed to the Editorial Advisory Board of The Journal of Cultural Diversity.

Dr. Mary Umlauf has completed the certification requirements for Adult Nurse Practitioner from the American Academy of Nurse Practitioners.

Dr. Marilyn Handley and Dr. JoAnn Oliver passed the NLN’s Certified Nurse Educator exam.

Dr. Ann Graves and The Capstone Rural Health Center has been awarded $17k from the Community Foundation of Greater Birmingham (CFGB) to help fund the Walker Area Resources and Needs (WARN) Project! This award is only $500 short of the proposed CFGB contribution and WARN is one of the few proposals that received anything near the total amount requested.
Dr. Roy Ann Sherrard wrote the article “Male Infertility: An Exploratory Comparison of African American and White Men” which was accepted for publication in The Journal of Cultural Diversity.

Dr. Susan Gaskins wrote the chapter “The Person with HIV/AIDS: Nursing Perspectives,” published in HIV Infection in Women. Dr. Gaskins has been appointed to the Research Committee of the Association of Nurses in AIDS Care, an international organization.

GASKINS RECEIVES GRANT FROM NINR

African Americans (AAs) are disproportionately affected by HIV/AIDS, accounting for 47% of all adults living with HIV/AIDS and their death rate is from AIDS is 10 times greater than whites’ (CDC, 2004). AA men have the highest rate of HIV infection in the country. And AID cases are growing most rapidly in the rural South. Conservative cultural norms in the rural South result in stigmatization and shunning, making people with HIV/AIDS reluctant to tell others about or disclose their disease. People who do not do so are less likely to have the knowledge and skills to manage their disease, less likely to use health care services and potentially are more likely to infect others. Disclosure of being HIV+ is a difficult and important decision, but it is key to accessing supportive resources and services necessary for positive health outcomes. However, there are potential negative consequences to disclosure such as rejection, discrimination, shame, fear and even physical violence.

Dr. Susan Gaskins has received a grant from the National Institute of Nursing Research (NINR) to study the decisions and experiences of rural AA men related to disclose being HIV+. Dr. Pamela Foster, Deputy Director of the Institute for Rural Health Research is co-investigator on the study and Dr. Richard Sowell, Professor and Dean at College of Health and Human Services at Kennesaw State University, a widely recognized scholar and researcher in HIV/AIDS, is a consultant on the study. Dr. Karl Hamner, Director of Scholarly Affairs at the Capstone College of Nursing, worked with Gaskins and Foster in developing the NIH grant application.

The study will address how rural AA men with HIV/AIDS describe disclosure decisions and experiences with partners and family members. Gaskins and Foster are interested in what helps or inhibits sharing their status with others, as well as the consequences for themselves, their partners and their families. Findings from the study will be used to develop interventions and programs to assist rural AA men in their decisions about telling others that will most likely lead to support, care, positive outcomes and decreased transmission of HIV.

The study will include 40 rural Alabama AA men with HIV/AIDS aged 19-49. Participants are being recruited from AIDS Service Organizations and clinics that serve rural populations (West Alabama AIDS Outreach, Selma AIR, and the 1917 Clinic at UAB). The men will be interviewed individually about their personal decisions and experiences related to telling others about their disease. The agencies involved in the study acknowledge that disclosure of HIV/AIDS is an issue that affects all of their clients. The goal of the study is better understand HIV/AIDS disclosure in this high risk population in order to develop and refine services, decrease HIV transmission, and enhance disease management for HIV infected individuals.
